Kiddie Prep School News

Why?

Are the endless questions driving you crazy? Here's how to handle your little inquisitor:

Your child's inquisitiveness is a signal that their mind is expanding quickly, and that she's curious about the world. She's starting to understand the concept of cause and effect—that there's a reason for almost everything. It's also a way for them to engage you in conversation, and keep you talking.

If you get tired of the constant whys, don't simply fall back on "that's just the way it is." Instead, try to deflect their questions by asking what they think. Your child's answer may amuse you, but try not to laugh—their mind is working in amazing ways as they connect the information they know about the world with their imagination.

If you truly don't know the answer, tell them the two of you can find out together. Look for the answer online, or by planning a visit to a library or museum to learn more. Their questions can help you participate in their research and you can have fun figuring it out together.

Looking for a fun Thanksgiving book to read with your kids? "One is a Feast for Mouse" is an adorable book that teaches us to be thankful for the small things and not get "greedy" eyes and want more, more,

ENTER HIS GATES
WITH Thanksgiving
AND HIS COURTS
WITH PRAISE;
GIVE Thanks
TO HIM
AND PRAISE
HIS NAME.
Psalm 100:4
