Let Me Think...

When your youngster is faced with a challenge, it's fun for them to come up with more than one solution or possibility. Stretch their thinking with these activities.

PUPPET PROBLEM-SOLVING—Offer a pretend dilemma for puppets, and help your child act out the solution. You could make your puppet say, "Oh, no! I have too many dishes to carry! How can I get them to the party?" (Put the in a bag, ask a friend to carry some.)

ANSWERS AND QUESTIONS— Tell your youngster, "The answer is a blanket. What is the question?" Take turns coming up with as many questions as possible. ("What keeps you warm at night? What do we sit on at a picnic?") When you run out of ideas, let them think of a new answer to make up questions for.

WHAT DOESN'T BELONG?- Look around the room, and name any four objects (T-shirt, book, hat, lipstick). Then, have your child decide which doesn't belong and explain why. For instance, they could say that the book is the only one you can't wear. Variation: Name three objects, and tell them to choose a fourth and explain how it's related to the three you picked.

Looking for a bible to read with your child at home? These are the two we use at Kiddie Prep!
